Author's Note: I found this poem in the book 'Chicken Soup for the Teenage Soul II' I changed it a little bit, so please, don't shout 'PLAGARIZER!' when you read it. Thank you, and enjoy the poem. BTW, this is written by Alison Mary Forbes (The REAL author)

I remember a time when each day was long,
>When the world was a playground and my life was a song,
And I fluttered through years with barely a care,
>Ignoring the future and what waited there.

School was intriguing and filled with delights.
>I played away daytimes and dreamed away nights.
My parents assured me I had nothing to fear,
>And that no matter what happened, they'd always be there.

Little I knew of the world outside home,
>Where tragedy, sorrow and murder could roam.
All I saw were blue skies, rainbows and stars.
>I looked past destruction of buildings and cars.

As a child, my biggest concern was just me;
>I had to be happy, I had to be free.
And if I were content, I would not shed a tear,
>And no matter what happened, I would still be here.

But as I grow up, darkness starts to set in;
>My bright world has turned into concrete and tin.
I now see the violence I looked past before;

>My friends start to die and my heart hits the floor.

Deadly diseases claim people I love,

>There are battles in me, invasions above.
I often think back to when life was a game.

>But no matter what happens, it can't be the same.

There are days when I just want to break down and howl,

>To give up completely, to throw in the towel,
But I hold my head
high and I push my way through.

>I have too much to give and so much to do.

And I make a vow that, though it'll be hard,

>I'll go on with a smile and play every card.
I'll give all I can, help others and love.

>No matter what happens, life will bloom again,
And the strength
I don't have will come from above.

So come, take my hand, and though darkness we will sailâ€”

>If we all join together, we never can fail.
We'll remember to care, remember to feel,

>And no matter what happens, our world we will heal.

End
file.
